Sadat says Libya moving troops, arms to border

WASHINGTON, March 28 (Agencies) — President Anwar Sadat said Wednesday he had received reports of military activity along the Egyptian-Libyan border, including Syrian planes sent to Libya last week.

Sadat, speaking at a news conference two days after signing a peace treaty with Israel, said Libyan leader Moammar Qaddafi was getting military help from Cuba and East Germany, and backing from the Soviet Union.

Asked if this could lead to a repeat of the Egyptian-Libyan border conflict of 1977, he said: "I think after the lesson in 1977, he (Qaddafi) will not repeat it. But he might be pushed by the Soviets."

Sadat said he expected Arab leaders who oppose him to decide within the next day or two whether to take measures against Egypt for signing the treaty.

But, he added, "whatever comes out of Baghdad will not change history at all or make it go backwards."

Asked what would happen if other Arab states cut off aid to Egypt, Sadat said: "whatever happens we shall face it."

The Egyptian leader predicted that the next two years would produce a lot of changes in the Middle East because of the peace treaty.

He said he believed 1979 might be a fateful year for some of the countries which at present oppose him.

"I think the more eligible for the first change would be in Syria," Sadat said.

Asked if he included the Syrian leadership of President Hafez Assad in this prediction, he said: "It includes that."

Assad was once one of President Sadat's closest allies but now opposes him over the treaty with Israel.

"He has to pull back from Lebanon," Sadat said of Assad in discussing Syrian involvement in that country.

Lebanon has proved to be a fiasco or quagmire. The situation is deteriorating in Syria itself. When he pulls back I think some change will take place there."

The Egyptian leader said that despite the fact that relations with Israel would soon face a test in negotiations over the issue of Palestinian autonomy, he believed the next stages would be much easier than before the treaty signing.

North, South Yemen hold peace summit

KUWAIT, March 28 (Agencies) — The presidents of North and South Yemen arrived here Wednesday to discuss political differences which last month erupted into a border war between their countries.

First to arrive was North Yemeni President Ali Abdullah Saleh. South Yemeni President Abdul Fatah Ismail landed three hours later.

Both were greeted at the airport by the ruler of Kuwait, Sheikh Jaber Al-Ahmed Al-Sabah.

Saleh and Ismail both conferred with Sheikh Jaber before moving to their guest quarters.

The ruler was expected to open the Yemeni summit conference later Wednesday at Al Salam Palace, where the two presidents were to stay.

Tight security was in force and newsmen were barred from the conference site.

The North Yemeni president said on arrival he looked forward to cooperation with South Yemen along the road to unity on "a firm and clear basis."

The president of South Yemen also urged unity, "which will bolster the struggle of the Arab nation at this critical juncture when the regime of (Egyptian President) Anwar Sadat has broken away from the Arab rank, inflicting serious damage on the pan Arab causes."

The conference, expected to last four days, is an effort to try to revive the 1972 Cairo agreement which urged the two countries to unite.

The agreement, which followed a border war, was never implemented because of the ideological differences between South and North Yemen.

Kuwaiti officials said the Arab League-sponsored summit is also being attended by Syrian Foreign Minister Abdul Halim Khaddam, Iraqi Planning Minister Adnan Hussein and Jordanian Foreign Minister Hassan Ibrahim.

The three ministers played a major role in separating the warring Yemeni factions and halting the border fighting, which erupted Feb. 23.

The flare-up assumed international importance because of stakes which the United States and the Soviet Union have in the strategic Red Sea region.

And because of the conflict, Saudi Arabia pulled its contingent out of the Arab peace-keeping force in Lebanon and also canceled all military leave.

The United States rushed military supplies to North Yemen to enable it to withstand the South Yemeni attackers.

He said the aim of the negotiations on autonomy for the West Bank and Gaza was not to make decisions on behalf of the Palestinians.

"We want to put them on the appropriate channel by full autonomy and then they can decide for themselves," he said.

Asked what he intended to do to try to get the Palestinians involved in the negotiations about their future, the president replied: "Lots of things."

Pressed on whether he could reveal precise plans, he smiled and said, "not yet."

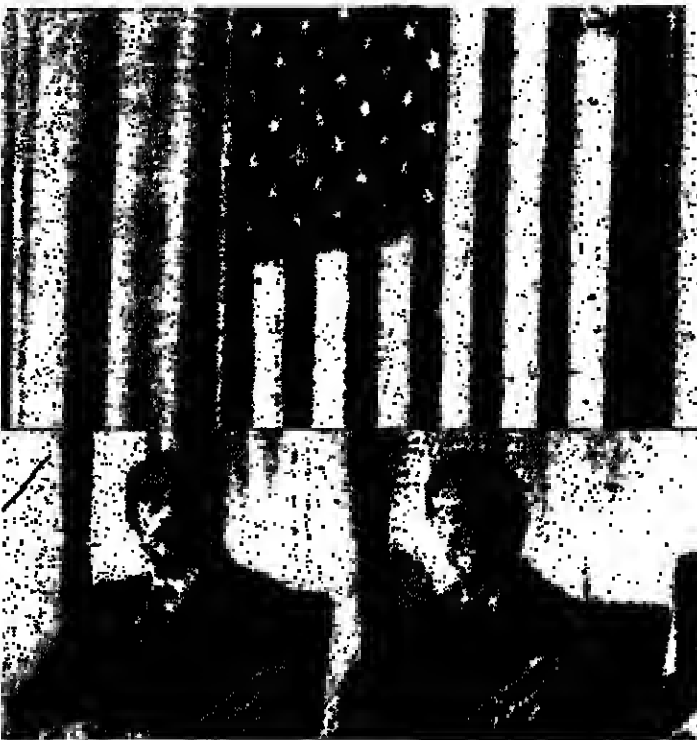

Meanwhile Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan returned home Wednesday and displayed the Hebrew copy of the peace treaty with Egypt, signed in Washington on Monday.

The heavy folder, bound in black and bordered in gold, was carried by foreign ministry legal expert Meir Rosenne.

Dayan said Rosenne had possibly done more than anybody else to formulate the text, "this is his baby, and he is carrying it," the foreign minister quipped.

After explaining the contents of the folder Dayan particularly stressed two accompanying documents to the treaty, signed by Israel and the United States.

Yamani says

No surcharge planned for Saudi oil prices

VIENNA, March 28 (Agencies) — Sheikh Ahmad Zaki Yamani, Saudi minister of petroleum and minerals said Wednesday "so far our decision is not to impose any surcharges" on Saudi oil.

Yamani flew to Vienna from Geneva, where ministers from the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries approved a 9 per cent increase in the basic price for oil, allowing individual members to add surcharges.

Analysts here said the Saudi decision not to add any surcharges could help hold down increases planned by the other OPEC producers.

The decision for the 9 per cent price increase had been made after a two-day conference in Geneva Tuesday.

Yamani came to Austria to talk with Austrian Chancellor Bruno Kreisky and to receive an honorary doctorate of an Austrian university.

Yamani was asked if Saudi Arabia planned to cut its production back to the level before the Iranian crisis.

He replied: "Our previous decision was to increase production only for the first quarter of this year, that is until the end of this month. If the Iranians go back (to a level) which is enough for the world demand, I think Saudi Arabia would reduce its production, and leave it to the other members in OPEC like Nigeria, Iraq and others to increase their production because they want to do so."

He added that if the Iranians fail to produce enough for world demand, "then of course we will do the same thing which we did in the past."

He said Saudi Arabia would not charge more for any extra oil it would produce to make up for a possible shortfall.

"We will only have one price," he asserted.

Earlier, Iran's national oil company chairman Hassan Nazib said his country would prefer to sell its oil on contracts of nine months to one year rather than on a spot basis.

All of Iran's exports are now being made on a spot basis and no long-term contract has been signed, he told a press conference in Geneva.

A number of foreign companies were in contact with Iran and prices for fixed-term contracts would be decided in the near future following Tuesday's OPEC pricing decision, he said.

Iran was ready to negotiate on an individual basis with the oil companies which were members of a former oil-buying consortium led by British Petroleum, but would no longer deal with the consortium as a bloc, he said.

Nazib said he was unable to make any predictions for the proportion of future oil sales which would be made on a long-term basis, nor could he give any indication of production levels as no decisions had yet been made.

Shooting reported in Kampala

NAIROBI, March 28 (Agencies) — United Nations officials in Kampala Wednesday reported shooting in the Ugandan capital and said they could see tanks with Tanzanian markings over the city center.

Diplomats said there were tank movements in Kampala Tuesday night but they doubted that the tanks the U.N. officials could see were actually Tanzanian.

They said their latest report was that Tanzanian armor, backing Ugandan exile invaders, was still at Mpigi, 40 kms southwest of Kampala.

"They could have made it in a morning dash if they met absolutely no resistance but we are sceptical about it," one diplomat said.

The U.N. officials, who were preparing to evacuate half their 400 employees and dependants in a road convoy and airlift Thursday, said shooting could be heard in the northern and southern parts of the capital from their offices in the city center.

They said they could see tanks with Tanzanian markings less than a kilometer from the city center but they were not firing.

Diplomats said they had seen no evidence yet that Libyan leader Col. Moammar Qaddafi had carried out the threat reported by Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere to give full military backing to Uganda if Tanzania did not withdraw its forces.

"We have seen no sign of a big airlift from Libya and we doubt that they have the airlift capacity to do such a thing. It is probably a bluff," said one diplomat.

Intelligence reports have said up to 600 Libyan troops have already been flown to Uganda to buttress President Idi Amin's regime against the invasion.

Partial Egypt boycott mandated by League

BAGHDAD, March 28 (Agencies) — Arab ministers will impose at least a partial economic boycott against Egypt but will not take sanctions against the United States at a Baghdad conference called to counter the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty, officials said Wednesday.

Instead, the ministers decided to call a higher-level conference of Arab heads of state to take economic counter-measures not approved at the last summit here in November, Iraqi Foreign Minister Saadoun Hammadi reported.

Hammadi did not indicate in his report to the Iraqi News Agency what further sanctions would be considered at another summit.

Meanwhile, Jordan Wednesday ordered its ambassador to Cairo recalled, the official Jordanian News Agency said.

Observers saw the withdrawal of Ambassador Zoukan Al Hindawi as a practical demonstration of protest against Egypt's signing of the treaty less than 48 hours before.

In Baghdad, the ministers also voted to transfer the Arab League headquarters from Cairo to Tunis, until the Egyptian government "conformed with the Arab will," according to Jordan's Foreign Minister Hassan Ibrahim.

The league's economic board will be transferred to Amman, he added.

Despite a call Tuesday from Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat "to hit the head of the snake—the United States," official sources from the conference said the ministers have no authority to impose sanctions against any country except Egypt.

The foreign and economic ministers, representing 18 of the 22 countries in the Arab League, came here to implement resolutions taken at the Arab summit conference last November to punish Egyptian President Anwar Sadat if he was to sign a peace treaty with Israel.

After the treaty was signed Monday, the chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) Arafat urged the ministers to go beyond that mandate and retaliate against the United States "for pushing Egypt and Israel into signing this treacherous treaty."

He said the wealthy Gulf states should impose an oil boycott—or at least raise prices 30 per cent and cut production—against the United States, stop trading with and take all their petrodollars from America.

Syria and Iraq, while highly critical of the U.S. role in the Middle East, have not proposed boycotting the United States. Syrian Foreign Minister Abdul Halim Khaddam told a reporter before arriving here that his country does not favor an oil cutoff to the United States and that the conference here should concentrate on sanctions against Egypt.

Iraqi Foreign Minister Saadoun Hammadi told a press conference Tuesday that an American boycott by the Arabs was fair game for "discussion" but he would not go farther than that.

He also said that agreement at the conference on anti-Sadat sanctions was "very encouraging."

The Baghdad summit had decreed that in case a separate treaty is signed, the Arab states would boycott any Egyptian institution or person dealing with Israel.

Arafat told the ministers that the Palestinians "will keep a close eye" on any Arab country that sells oil to Egypt, because "Sadat will be taking it with the right hand and selling it to Israel with the left."

At the moment, Egypt is a net exporter of oil, so this is current.

World leaders question treaty

From staff and wire reports

BONN, March 28 — United Nations Secretary General Kurt Waldheim said Wednesday the Israeli-Egyptian peace treaty must be followed up by an overall Middle East settlement including the "key" Palestinian problem.

The U.N. was ready to take part in a new Geneva-style multilateral Middle East conference if it were considered useful, he told a press conference here during a four-day visit.

Waldheim welcomed the fact that two countries so long at war had now concluded a peace treaty, but he was skeptical whether the follow-up talks between Egypt, Israel and the United States would produce a solution to the key question of the Palestinians' future.

The treaty provided no concrete solution to the Palestinian problem, he said.

"Prospects of an overall Middle East settlement exist only if all those affected, including those at present standing on the sides, are brought back into international negotiations," he said.

"I would not be surprised if everything landed back in the lap of the United Nations."

In Damascus Tuesday, thousands of demonstrators shouting slogans against the treaty and calling for the downfall of President Anwar Sadat marched through the main streets.

They were headed by Syrian Premier Muhammad Ali Haddad, Speaker Mahmoud Hadid, cabinet ministers and religious, trade union and Baath Party leaders.

The marchers carried black flags and placards denouncing the treaty as a pact of shame and treason.

In London Tuesday, former Sudanese Premier Sadik Al-Mahdi attacked the treaty for ignoring Palestinian rights, avoiding the Jerusalem problem and isolating the United Nations and the Soviet Union from the peace process.

Libyan leader Moammar Qaddafi Tuesday called Arab heads of state saying Sadat was "a traitor who had crossed over to the other camp."

"We have said time and time

Turkoman rebels continue fight as Iran referendum approaches

TEHRAN, March 28 (R) — Fighting raged Wednesday for the third day running in the north-eastern town of Gonbad Kavus near the Soviet border, according to local residents.

A nurse, from the local Turkoman community, her voice choked with tears, telephoned Tehran to say that hospitals in the town were refusing to treat wounded Turkomans.

She cried, "we have no medicines, no blood, nothing, please help."

Another resident said that wounded Turkomans, fighting for self-rule, were being rushed into nearby homes and treated on the spot. The tribesmen had captured an ambulance carrying arms to non-Turkoman militiamen, he said.

"We are fighting in alleys, on rooftops, everywhere," he said, adding that the Turkomans had blazed away at an Iranian air force F-4 Phantom jet which flew high over the town to avoid being hit.

The nurse, phoning from a home where she said she had nothing with which to treat three freshly-wounded casualties, said that four Turkoman doctors had been detained in the town.

"These people are human beings, you must come to our rescue," she sobbed.

The Turkomans, who number about 100,000, are the latest regional minority to voice their grievances since last month's revolution toppled the Shah.

Thousands of Iranian troops were pinned down last week by a Kurdish uprising, which forced the government to promise the Kurds a greater say in their own affairs.

The unrest in the northeast, which has prompted one of Iran's top religious leaders to denounce "colonialist attempts" to fan a civil war, highlighted the country's instability only two days before a crucial referendum on a proposed Islamic republic.

The government Tuesday night reported that at least 16 persons were killed and 50 injured in the street battles so far, but unofficial estimates put the casualty toll far higher.

A simmering land dispute has long opposed the two sides in Gonbad Kavus and last month's revolution brought a deep-seated racial resentment to the surface.

"I've sent my two sons to fight the Persians," was the way one Turkoman put it in a telephone call from the town.

The controversial role of the army in last week's Kurdish fighting led to the dismissal of Maj. Gen. Muhammad Vail Gharani as chief of staff of the armed forces, according to the Tehran daily "Kayhan."

Meanwhile, the leading political and religious influence on Iran's three million Kurds, Sheikh Ezzeddin Hosseini, was quoted Wednesday as saying he would boycott Friday's vote because no one knew what an "Islamic republic" meant and because "the future of home rule for the Kurds and other nationalities within the framework of a free Iran has not been clarified."

Dubai ruler rejects unity memorandum

ABU DHABI, March 28 (AP) — Ruler of Dubai, Sheikh Rashid bin Said Al-Maktoum Wednesday rejected a reform memorandum submitted by the National Assembly, casting doubt on the future progress of moves toward greater unity in the United Arab Emirates.

Those who drafted this memorandum have totally ignored the provisions of the constitution, thus shaking the foundations on which the federation stands," Sheikh Rashid said in a press statement.

The ten-point memorandum, submitted to the Supreme Council of the federation's seven rulers last week, called for greater unity to be achieved through the abolition of borders, a single budget and the unification of the armed forces.

Dubai is the second most important member of the federation, after Abu Dhabi, pre-eminent because of its oil resources, the main source of the federation's income.

Sheikh Rashid is believed to be opposed to greater unity as this would tend to strengthen Abu Dhabi in the federation. Five of the federation's members are entirely dependent financially on Abu Dhabi grants.

Sheikh Rashid's rejection came a day after he boycotted one of the rare meetings of the federation's Supreme Council, composed of the seven rulers.

The ruler of Ras Al-Khaimah, one of the smaller members also stayed away.

The Supreme Council met last week for the first time since 1976, to consider the reform memorandum. These deliberations were adjourned till Tuesday and were to resume shortly after Sheikh Rashid announced his rejection.

Islamic conference condemns peace treaty

JEDDAH, March 28 — The majority of the 42 countries of the Islamic conference, the bloc of Muslim countries at the United Nations, have implicitly rejected the peace treaty signed in Washington Monday between Egypt and Israel.

The conference's Jeddah-based secretariat, the Organization of the Islamic Conference, said Wednesday that "no durable peace is possible in the Middle East unless based on a just solution of the problems of the West Bank, Gaza, the Golan Heights and Jerusalem."

The peace treaty makes no mention of the Golan Heights or of the eventual restitution of Jerusalem to Islamic control.

In a statement to the press Tuesday, Secretary General Dr. Amadou Karim Gaye said that this "solution" is known to everybody and has been affirmed time and again in various U.N. decisions.

Refugees flee Tyre camps as Israeli activity reported

SIDON, Lebanon, March 28 (R) — Many Palestinian refugees have abandoned their homes in two camps near the southern port city of Tyre amid reports Israeli warplanes flew reconnaissance missions Tuesday along the coastline.

But Israeli military officials Wednesday denied that Israeli planes flew over Lebanon or that its gunboats sailed along the Lebanese coastline.

Local Lebanon residents said the commandos and their Lebanese leftist allies fired three times at the planes.

The refugees sought safer ground in some schools and unfinished buildings in Sidon.

For the second day running, Israeli gunboats were sighted off the southern part of the coast.

Tuesday Palestinian-leftist forces said they fired at three Israeli gunboats in the same region and used anti-aircraft guns to fire at the planes.

In the cabinet changes, Driss Basri, formerly secretary of state for the interior, took over the interior portfolio from Dr. Muhammad Benhima.

Other changes involved the ministries of finance, commerce and industry, tourism, labor, agriculture and information.

Former Finance Minister Abdul Latif Ghissassi became minister of agriculture, while Abdul Salam Zinedine, former secretary of state for general affairs at the premier's office, became minister of tourism.

Mauritania abandons role in Sahara dispute

NOUAKCHOTT, Mauritania, March 28 (AP) — Mauritania has decided to abandon its share of the former Spanish Sahara and back out of the three-year-long Guerilla war with the Algerian-sponsored Polisario Liberation Movement in the territory.

President Moustapha Ould Muhammad Salek seized full powers on March 20 and purged his ruling "military committee of national recovery" of its pro-Polisario members. But at the same time, he announced his country irrevocably intends to get out of the Sahara war and give up its claim to the 34,000 square miles of arid wilderness annexed when Spain withdrew in 1976.

Polisario's leadership has so far refused to accept the Mauritanian surrender offer unless Salek agrees to join actively in the war against Mauritania's present ally, Morocco.

Morocco, which has annexed the mineral-rich northern two-thirds of the Spanish Sahara, is determined to hold on to its share of the territory regardless of the cost or the Mauritanian defection.

Some 6,000 Moroccan troops remain deployed against the guerrillas on Mauritanian territory, particularly to protect the Zouerate iron mines and the 400-mile rail link to the Port of Nouadhibou. The mines are back in full operation after the guerrilla las had almost brought Mauritania's only major industry to a standstill. Western military sources estimate that the guerrilla war is costing Morocco an estimated $1 million a day.

Bhutto lawyers ask Sind court for stay

RAWALPINDI, March 28 (R) — Lawyers for condemned ex-Premier Zulfikar Ali Bhutto have filed a petition asking the Sind High Court to declare Bhutto's trial unconstitutional and for a stay order on his execution.

The court said that Wednesday it would hear preliminary arguments on the petition — A last-ditch attempt to save Bhutto from the gallows.

Pro-Bhutto lawyers said Bhutto had been served notice that he had exhausted all legal avenues of appeal against his death sentence for ordering the assassination of a political opponent more than four years ago.

Normally the courts issue a "black warrant" fixing a provisional date for execution to take place after a seven-day period in which Bhutto could appeal for mercy.

Authorities at Rawalpindi's District Jail, where Bhutto is confined to a death cell, refused to give the execution date which they said was virtually certain to be amended.

They also refused to say whether they had started to count off the seven days that must lapse before Bhutto could be legally hanged.

"This is not a normal case and we shall not do anything before we receive the go-ahead from Gen. Zia," an official said. Pakistan's ruler Gen. Zia-ul-Haq who overthrew Bhutto in a coup in mid-1977, has always said he would abide by the verdict of the Supreme Court.

Nur Muhammad Taraki will continue as president of Afghanistan, but has given up the position of prime minister, which he held until Tuesday.

Taraki held the posts of both the president and prime minister since his Soviet-backed government came into power in April, 1978. Hafeczullah Amin is younger and considered to be more pro-Moscow than Taraki.

The radio gave no reasons for the change.

The change followed widespread speculation in the Afghan capital of Kabul about a possible redistribution of power brought on by growing anti-government unrest.

Afghanistan has shown itself increasingly concerned over a guerrilla campaign waged by tribesmen against the government's left-wing ideology.

Dissidents claim the fighting has spread to more than half of Afghanistan's 28 provinces.

Burhanuddin Rabbani, leader of the Jamiat-Islami Afghanistan, one of the exiled groups in Pakistan that claim to speak for the guerrillas, said the government reshuffle would not affect the campaign to topple the government.

Giscard cancels trip

Sources assert Brezhnev unwell

PARIS, March 28 (R) — President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing has postponed his planned visit to Moscow this week because President Leonid Brezhnev has health problems, informed sources say.

The Elysee Presidential Palace said in a communique that France and the Soviet Union had jointly decided to postpone the visit, which was due to start on Thursday.

The communique said the visit would take place in three weeks, but no precise dates were given. The Elysee also gave no reason for the postponement.

But informed sources in Paris said the visit had been put off "because of Brezhnev's health, because of recent sudden cold (in Moscow)".

Over the past few years, there has been frequent speculation on the 72-year-old leader's health.

Earlier this year, Brezhnev was absent from the public scene for several weeks.

Tuesday night's Elysee communique said: "The French and Soviet authorities have jointly decided that the official working visit President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing was to have started on March 19 in the USSR is postponed by three weeks."

Exact dates for this visit will be announced later.

Officials at the Soviet Embassy in Paris were not available for comment.

INN Moscow

In Moscow, all the evidence pointed to the decision to put off the trip being taken at short notice.

Tuesday's Moscow newspapers continued their buildup to the presidential visit and the talks between the French head of state and Brezhnev.

Brezhnev's uncertain health has been a subject of speculation for some time, but he looked fit and well in Soviet television pictures of his meeting on March 22 with Thai Premier Kriangsak Chamanand, the most recent foreign visitor to see him.

He disappeared from view for some weeks during January and February but has been back at his Kremlin desk for the last month.

Last week, however, when he presented medals to Premier Alexei Kosygin and another member of the ruling Politburo, the awards were pinned to the recipients' chests not by Brezhnev himself but by an aide.

For making case last three years

Nazi trial prosecutor called inhuman

DUSSELDORF, March 28 (R) — A defense lawyer at West Germany's longest war crimes trial has accused the prosecution of infringing the United Nations Human Rights Convention by dragging the proceedings on for over three years.

Lawyer Jürg Weck said Tuesday the U.N. Convention guaranteed all people the right to a speedy trial and added his client, 61-year-old former concentration camp guard Charlotte Meyer, had suffered bad publicity because of the long hearings.

The prosecution recommended last week that Mrs. Meyer and three other defendants, with the murder of Jewish charged and other inmates in World War II, be released because they could not be positively identified by any of the 300 witnesses heard so far.

The four, expected to be formally freed next month, were alleged by the prosecution to have assisted in the "selection" of camp inmates for the gas chamber. The other defendants are former SS doctor Heinrich Schmidt, 66, and guards Hermine Böttcher and Rosa Suss, both 60.

The trial of nine other former officials at Maidanek camp, near Lublin, Poland, will continue.

Schmidt's lawyer said his client was "an honorable man who was drawn into the SS by fate and not his own free will." He had suffered every day of the three-and-a-half year trial because he did not consider himself guilty of murder.

Lawyers for Mrs. Böttcher and Mrs. Suss will speak for their clients later.

The prosecution made no comment in court on the accusation that it had infringed human rights.

But a court official told reporters the charge was unfounded. The court had been trying "with scrupulous exactitude" to throw light on the fate of at least 250,000 victims of the Nazis at Maidanek.

Negotiations seem further off as Peking, Hanoi trade insults

HONG KONG, March 28 (Agencies) — China and Vietnam Wednesday accused each other of preventing early negotiations to settle their dispute.

Hanoi accused Peking of "sheer deception" over its promised withdrawal while Chinese Vice-Premier Wang Zhen (Wang Chen) said, "Vietnam has thrown itself into the lap of Soviet-social imperialism. It has carried out aggression against our country."

The two have agreed to meet in Hanoi for peace talks after China's month-long incursion into Vietnam, but no date has been fixed.

Peking had suggested Wednesday, but now claims this is impossible because Hanoi made a "180-degree turn" and broke its promises.

Hanoi opted for Thursday as the opening date, but a Foreign Ministry statement published Wednesday by the official Vietnamese News Agency said Chinese troops were still in more than 10 places on Vietnamese territory.

The statement said China was continuing to mass troops close to the Laotian and Vietnamese borders and concluded:

"Responsibility for the delay of the talks rests entirely with the Chinese side."

The Communist Party newspaper "Nhan Dan" said Wednesday Vietnam was still ready to talk.

with Peking "but first of all the Chinese side must withdraw all its troops from our territory."

A Vietnamese Foreign Ministry note to the Chinese ministry Tuesday charged Peking's troops were still holding more than 10 places that had been administered by Hanoi before the Chinese invasion Feb. 17.

The Chinese government delegation will be welcomed if it is present in Hanoi for negotiations one day after Chinese troops have withdrawn from all the places they still occupy in Vietnamese territory," the note said.

Last week Hanoi said it was ready to sit down at the table March 29 if all Chinese troops were out of Vietnam by March 28.

The note said the Chinese were still holding areas of Lang Son, Cao Bang, Ha Tuyen and Hoang Lien Son Provinces continuing to mass troops close to the Vietnamese and Laotian borders and "firing artillery and other kinds of weapons into Vietnamese territory."

The latest Vietnamese note appeared to leave open a date to begin negotiations. It said Peking had to bear "full responsibility" for the delay in talks.

China, however, has warned Vietnam that it faces another Chinese "counter-attack" if it obeys "Soviet instructions" and commits armed provocations and incursions in the border areas.

The official Chinese newspaper "People's Daily" Tuesday also accused Moscow of inciting the Vietnamese to create tension along the border and said all its troops had pulled out of Vietnam by March 16.

Fiji hurricane kills two

SUVA, Fiji March 28 (AP) — Hurricane Meli drove across the Fiji Islands early Wednesday with winds of up to 155 mph, killing two persons and driving a coastal trader aground, authorities reported.

A Suva man died when he stepped on a downed power line and a girl was killed when a tree fell on her house in a town about 80 miles west of here.

The storm forced the Cenpac Rounder aground before dawn Wednesday on a reef at Vatulele Island, Southwest of Suva. The number of people on board was not known.

Fiji officials said the ship, a 3,200-ton cargo-passenger vessel, said it was not in danger of sinking.

Officials said the hurricane was centered late Wednesday morning about 100 miles southwest of Viti Levu, the main island, and moving away from the 300-island group.

The government's Emergency Services Committee in Suva said communications with many small islands had been cut or interrupted.

Damage reports were incomplete, but the committee said Lakemba Island, about 170 miles east of Suva, was hardest hit.

London mailmen go slow; 8 million letters pile up

LONDON, March 28 (AP) — Eight million letters have piled up in London because of an unofficial work slowdown by the capital's mailmen.

The Post Office Tuesday asked Londoners, and their correspondents abroad, not to mail anything in or for London "unless it is absolutely essential."

Deliveries are already four or five days late, parcels are being held up even longer, mail from abroad is stalled at Heathrow Airport, and London's bulk second-class mail service was suspended.

"We've asked people not to post mail in London or for London unless it is absolutely essential, as all mail is being severely disrupted," Post Office official Derek Willson said.

Joe Clark blasts Trudeau to open Canada campaign

OTTAWA, March 28 (R) — Opposition leader Joe Clark entered Canada's general election campaign Tuesday by attacking Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau's economic record as shocking, and pledging more jobs and less inflation.

By contrast Trudeau, who on Monday night called an election for May 22, based his campaign on the nation's unity crisis and called on Canadians to choose decisively between his liberal party and the progressive conservatives.

German victims of flood said accounted for

NUREMBERG, March 28 (AP) — All residents of a small Bavarian village flooded by tons of water after a dike on a canal burst have been accounted for, police said Wednesday.

A 12-year-old girl was killed, eight persons were injured and dozens of homes were damaged in Monday's disaster.

Police feared the death toll could climb sharply because at least 70 residents of the village of Katzwang were reported missing the morning after the break.

Bavarian state radio broadcast urgent appeals for residents to telephone police and report their whereabouts. By late Tuesday night, all the missing had been found.

time like this," Trudeau said, referring to Quebec separatism and growing regionalism in resource-rich western Canada.

The prime minister, in power since 1968 and seeking a fourth term of office, said it was the rise of Quebec separatism that had persuaded him to stay in office.

At a later news conference, Clark, at 39 fighting his first election as party leader, said living costs in Canada had doubled and unemployment had tripled in the past decade. The Trudeau government had a "pretty shocking record," he said.

He pledged to achieve economic growth of five per cent compared to 3.4 per cent last year, create 1.5 million jobs by 1985 and bring down inflation from the current nine per cent.

Both liberals and conservatives are committed to Canadian unity, but voting is likely to split along linguistic lines with English-speaking provinces for Clark and French-speaking Quebec supporting Trudeau.

Clark, an English-Canadian, has made a point of learning French in an effort to show himself as a truly national leader, and answered some questions fluently at his news conference.

A recent opinion poll showed both major parties closely tied in popularity, raising the prospect of neither party winning the election outright and the center-left New Democratic Party becoming the fulcrum on which power will balance.

Refueling at long range

Big jet tanker will ease U.S. airlifts

WASHINGTON, March 28 (AP) — A new cargo-tanker plane authorized by Congress will overcome the problem that arises when other nations refuse to let American planes refuel during controversial crises, the United States' top air transport officer said Tuesday.

"Too frequently, we find that other nations don't necessarily share our views with respect to contingencies that occur around the world," said Gen. William Moore, head of the Military Airlift Command. "At times in the past we've been denied entry for refueling of our aircraft."

The new tanker-cargo plane, the KC-10, is a version of the DC-10, the large passenger plane used by many airlines for intercontinental flights.

The new plane will be capable of being re-fueled in the air, of re-fueling other planes in the air, and of carrying cargo long distances itself.

The U.S. Air Force has ordered

20 of the new planes. They are expected to be in service from 1983, at a cost of $51.2 million a piece.

Moore, speaking at the Aero Club, said the C-141 transport, which he called the workhorse of his command, is being remodeled so that it too can be refueled in the air.

Guerrilla mortar attack

Salisbury police post shelled

SALISBURY, March 28 (AP) — Black nationalist guerrillas attacked a Salisbury police station with mortar fire late Tuesday night but a police communiqué said there were no injuries or damage.

The attack hit a police station housing a dog training unit on the northwestern edge of the city, the police said.

Salisbury has been relatively untouched by violence during much of the six years of bloody guerrilla war between Rhodesian security forces and insurgents that has left 12,000 dead.

But, as the country prepares to go to the polls next month to elect a black majority government after 90 years of white domination, even this gracious, tree-lined capital has become an unwilling participant in the conflict.

The black guerrillas have vowed to disrupt the election, claiming that the blacks in the transition government of Prime Minister Ian Smith are just "white stooges."

Last December, guerrillas hit a fuel depot on the outskirts of the city with rocket fire, destroying millions of gallons of precious gasoline.

Last month, guerrillas hit the city's main power station with rockets and small arms fire, but no serious damage was done.

Also last month, guerrillas hit Salisbury International Airport, one of Rhodesia's last remaining air links with the outside world.

with mortar fire, but no damage was reported.

Rhodesian authorities have announced the cullup of every able-bodied male between 18 and 50 during the election period next month to keep the peace in the face of guerrilla threats of a dramatic escalation of violence throughout the country.

The police station attack was the first reported within the city limits since the unsuccessful mortar attack on Salisbury's International Airport on Feb. 19.

The statement said the attack took place at about 11:10 p.m. (2110 GMT), but did not indicate how long it lasted.

U.S. grand jury indicts banker in Lance inquiry

ATLANTA, March 28 (AP) — The Grand Jury investigating former U.S. Government budget director Bert Lance made its first public move in 14 months Tuesday, indicting a banker in connection with a loan to a Lance associate.

The four-count indictment alleges that Larry Beasley, former president of the First National Bank of Newton County, misapplied his bank's funds in November 1977 when he arranged a $37,000 loan to Richard Carr.

Carr, former president of the Northwest Georgia Bank of Ringgold, helped manage Lance's unsuccessful 1974 bid for the governorship of Georgia. In the early 1970s, he was an officer of the Calhoun First National Bank which Lance headed. Carr was not charged with a crime.

Lance, who resigned under fire as President Jimmy Carter's budget director in September 1977, was not named in the Beasley indictment.

The grand jury adjourned without further action Tuesday, but was scheduled to resume deliberations Wednesday morning.

Lance, a personal friend of Carter's, resigned his federal office amid allegations that he engaged in questionable banking activities as head of the First National Bank of Calhoun and later the National Bank of Georgia in Atlanta.

Loans by the National Bank of Georgia to the Carter family peanut business in Plains during Lance's tenure as NBG president are the subject of a separate investigation by newly appointed special counsel Paul Curran of New York.

The conscience of the leaders

By Bob Lebling
and Fouzi El Asmar

WASHINGTON —

Washington police and the Secret service viewed them as a threat. The Carter administration tried to drown them out with Marine band music and tolling church bells. Passers-by and newsmen watched them with a mixture of curiosity and apprehension.

But President Carter, Prime Minister Begin and President Sadat could not ignore them. And once during his address at the treaty signing ceremony on the White House lawn, Begin raised his voice in apparent challenge to the pro-Palestinian demonstrators chanting anti-treaty slogans across the way in Lafayette Park.

If the Palestinians are the conscience of the Arab world, the Arab students and other sympathizers who protested the Egyptian-Israeli treaty signing here Monday served as the conscience of the three leaders who put their signatures on the bilateral peace agreement.

After the ceremony, at the state dinner, President Sadat went to great lengths to defend the Palestinian cause and call for eventual Palestinian statehood — in part an apology for "inadvertently" dropping all references to the Palestinians from his early treaty — signing address.

The pro-Palestinian demonstration in Lafayette Park, which attracted between 2,500 and 3,000 protesters from all over the country, was an emotion-charged experience for the participants.

Said one Palestinian who took part: "There were times when I had tears in my eyes."

Most of the demonstrators were Arabs, supported by sympathetic Iranians, Black Muslims and some middle-class white Americans. There were Palestinian women in brightly colored traditional folk dress, proud old men wearing the Hattas of their homeland, young children who have never seen Palestine.

The demonstrators began their protest at about 11 o'clock Monday morning, marching from Dupont Circle in northwest Washington to Lafayette Park in front of the White House.

Two loudspeaker vans laden with placards and Palestinian flags accompanied the procession, as the thousands of marchers paraded through the streets of the capital, shouting pro-PLO and anti-treaty slogans.

Atop one of the vans, a Palestinian carried a large poster showing Sadat wearing a Dayan eyepatch, with an American flag in the background.

Other posters read: "Palestine is not for sale," "the people united will never be defeated," and "the Shah is gone — Sadat next."

When the marchers reached Lafayette Park, police directed them behind hastily erected snow fences in the northern area of the park — as far away from the treaty ceremony as possible.

Still, the protesters were only 150 meters from the White House lawn.

Police with riot gear and gas masks had sealed off the area. Police deployed themselves between the demonstrators and the White House — one line consisting of 29 park police on horseback.

From the rooftops of the White House and surrounding buildings, armed Secret Service officers watched warily through binoculars.

Reporters counted some 350 policemen in the area. In addition, plainclothes officers and FBI men filtered among the demonstrators, taking photographs and movies and tape-recording chants and conversations.

When the treaty ceremony began, the protesters, aided by two loudspeakers, greeted the arrival of Carter, Begin and Sadat with the impassioned chant: "Palestine is not for sale."

The demonstrators sent two of their people up to the White House grounds to find out if the three leaders and their 1,600 guests could hear the chants from the park.

The two "scouts" returned with the news: "yes they can hear us."

Then a man climbed a nearby tree and began waving a Palestinian flag. The marchers clapped and cheered their approval.

When Carter, Sadat and Begin began signing the treaty documents, the protesters released four helium balloons attached to a Palestinian flag, which rose slowly into the air and toward the White House, in plain view of the treaty signers.

At this point, several student demonstrators trampled the snow fence between them and the police. The policemen prepared for a clash, but march organizers quickly restored order and there was no violence.

The protesters continued their chants until long after the treaty ceremony ended. They then listened to speeches by Palestinian activists, before dispersing peacefully and heading home.

The demonstration attracted a great deal of attention from the representatives of the American media. Many reporters and TV cameramen mingled with the crowd — though precious little of the TV coverage appeared on the network news later that night.

Also present at the demonstration were many employees of Arab embassies, who had been given the afternoon off to take part in the protest. Significantly, no Arab diplomats received invitations to attend the treaty signing ceremony — though it is doubtful any would have attended if asked.

While protesters marched in Washington, pro-Palestinian supporters staged simultaneous demonstrations in over 41 U.S. and Canadian cities.

There were protests in Boston, New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, Detroit, Montreal, Vancouver, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Toronto and numerous other cities.

The Detroit demonstration included over 1,000 marchers. Figures for other major cities were not immediately available.

In Mount Pleasant, Iowa, the town librarian arranged a speakerphone book up so that local high school students could speak with march organizers in Washington.

In Columbus, Ohio, demonstrators set up a symbolic display near the state capitol. There were two tables: one was bare, and had a Palestinian sitting at it, the other was piled high with exotic foods, symbolic of the state dinner at the White House Monday night.

In east Lansing, Michigan, students at Michigan State University chartered and paid for a bus to Washington to join in the demonstration there. The students felt this would be a more effective way to protest, since their university was closed for spring vacation.

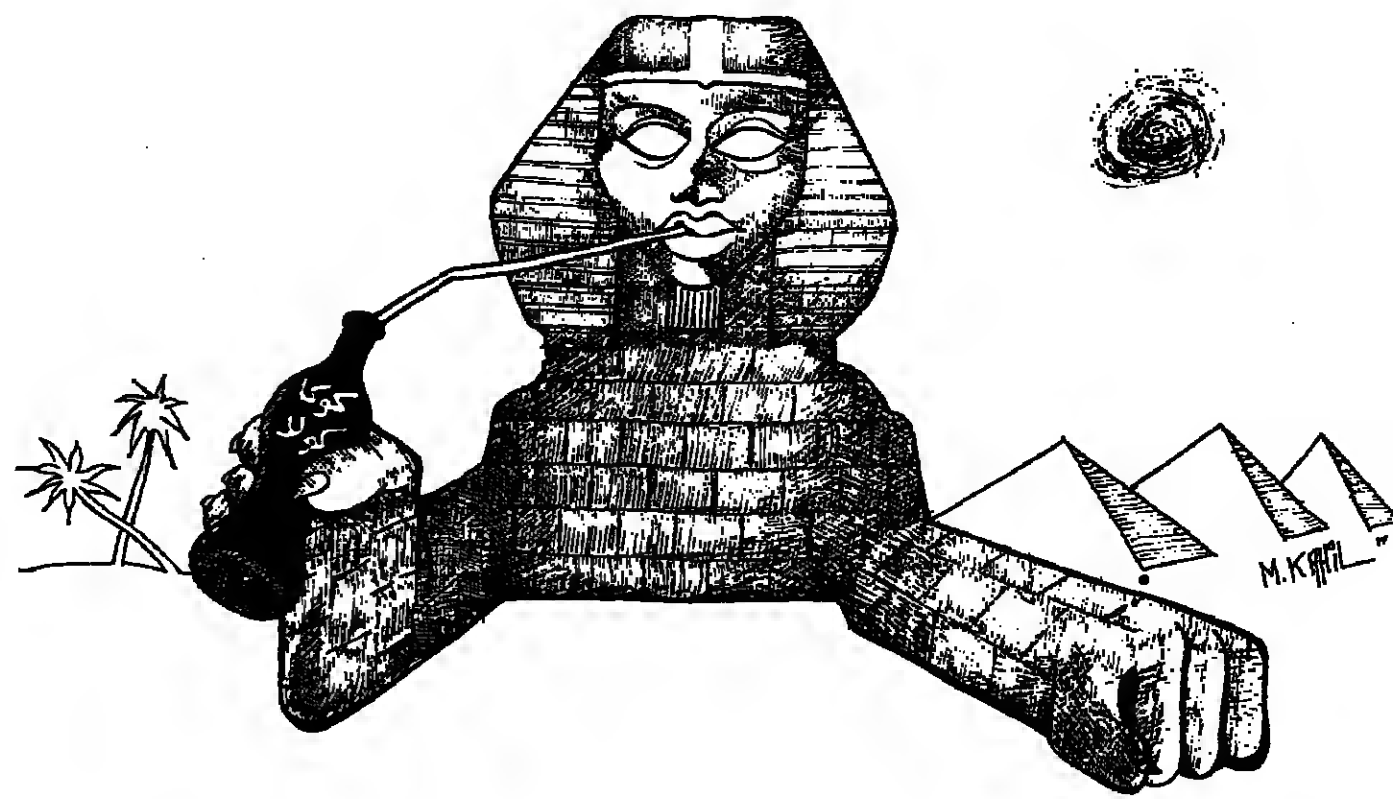

The Arabs are now faced with grave challenges — similar to those of 1948 when Israel was imposed on them — according to an editorial in "Okaz". Unless they formulate a unified strategy to prevent further fragmentation, they may well suffer consequences similar to those of that year. This is, then the real importance of a strategy to which all the Arabs should be committed to serve their supreme interests. Such a strategy would entail a careful study of Arab resources which would then be amassed to achieve their objective. We have had many setbacks in the past, but with prudence and careful planning we were able to overcome them, and we should do so this time.

"Al-Jezrah" said it could understand the jubilation of Begin on signing the peace agreement with Egypt because he got what he wanted and more. He was supported by the Israelis in the occupied lands, by the American Jews, and the governments that offered its full confidence in him. He was confident that he had secured the approval of his people with whom he had discussed the whole issue and consulted through a democratic process before signing anything. Not so the other side of the agreement.

But the night of the agreement was a watershed in Arab history, enabling the Arab people to know where they stand and where their friends and foes stand. And we hope that the Baghdad conference will embody the new realization and crystallize Arab responsibilities in the face of this ferocious new invasion which takes many forms.

The next step for Begin is not only to draw away with the Palestinian people — treating them like American Indians — but to consider the whole Arab people as American Indians too. This is already being planned against us, the paper said.

The Palestinians: A forgotten people

By Gavin Bell

BEIRUT —

The Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty has evoked defiance tempered by sadness among Palestinian refugees condemned to live in sprawling shanty-towns in Lebanon.

The signing ceremony, hailed in Washington as a historic breakthrough for peace, has made Palestinians unable to return to their homeland feel more than ever that they are a forgotten people.

Widespread Arab opposition to the agreement has focused on charges that it ignored the Palestinian diaspora, which has swelled to more than two million people since it was spawned by the first Middle East war more than 30 years ago.

The refugee camps scattered throughout Lebanon are full of disillusioned old men, as well as armed young fighters deeply committed to recovering the lost land.

Hassan Saleh was 13 years old when aircraft bombed his village in Galilee in 1948, forcing his family to leave its small farm and join the exodus of refugees to Lebanon.

He spent three wretched, hungry years in a succession of temporary camps, sharing a tent with up to 10 people, before settling in a squalid community in a suburb of Beirut called Shatila.

He now has a large family of his own, but earns only about 20 Lebanese pounds (seven dollars) a day selling vegetables from a wheelbarrow.

Hassan keeps his simple, three-room concrete house neat and clean, but winter rainstorms churn the narrow alley outside into a morass of mud and untreated sewage.

He speaks with a quiet pathos far removed from bellicose rhetoric.

"I was too angry when I was hearing that Sadat had finally signed that treaty with the Israelis," he said.

"How can he let them keep our homeland? I don't think he can be a real Arab."

"You know, we don't want to drive the Jews into the sea. We only want to live again as before. Palestinian Muslims, Christians and Jews all together."

"It has made me very sad because I always believed that one day we would talk it over and then go home, but now I think our fighters are right — we will have to struggle for our land."

"We understand what the Israelis are planning for the Arabs. They just want more and more land. How can you talk peace with people like that?"

Across the way, 31-year-old Hassan Abdul Hadi was relaxing in a two-room house given to him by his father-in-law with his wife and three young children.

A veteran of the June 1967 war, he is now a major in the Palestine Armed Struggle Command (PASC), an elite military police unit, earning 940 Lebanese pounds ($313) per month.

His mother, father and seven brothers and sisters are still in the Israeli-occupied Gaza Strip and he has not seen them since being released from an Israeli jail and sent to Egypt in a prisoner-of-war exchange 12 years ago.

Sitting cross-legged on a thin carpet in a sparsely-furnished living room, Hassan said angrily: "It is not a peace treaty. It is a war treaty. You know what the Israelis and the Egyptians are going to buy with all the money the Americans have promised them in exchange for our land? They are going to buy guns. How can you call it a peace treaty?"

His right fist clenched to emphasize his words, he said: "I wouldn't trade one bandful of Palestinian soil for the whole world. I want to go home. I want my land."

As his young wife Sabah nodded in agreement, Hassan said:

"We know our way very well. The struggle must go on. I would rather fight to recover Palestine than spend the rest of my life as an outcast in a refugee camp."

The sense of outrage and determination is shared by many unfortunate Palestinians who have escaped the bleak life of shanty towns.

Rashid Khalidi, a 30-year-old professor at the American University of Beirut, was raised in the United States and educated at Oxford University in England, but is deeply committed to return to his family home in Jerusalem.

"My reaction to the treaty mainly disgusts," he said. "It is extremely depressing to see an Arab leader sign a pact with the Israelis while they still occupy the land of Palestine."

Before leaving the Shatila Camp, my guide from the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) had pointed to a group of young children playing in a mud street.

"Ask them where they come from and they will give you the answer of their parents' home village in Palestine," he said.

"Nobody, not Carter, Begin or Sadat, will ever take that away from them."

Cambodia 'captures Chinese advisers'

By Harish Chandola

PHNOM PENH —

Cambodia is holding a number of Chinese "military advisers", Hun Sen, the country's Foreign Minister, said here in an interview.

He said they were captured in December and January as they directed forces of the ousted Pol Pot regime against the new, Vietnamese-backed government. He claimed they were officers of the People's Liberation Army of China — the Chinese regular army.

Hun Sen, who is 28, once served as a unit commander in Pol Pot's army. He said he left in 1977 when he realised the former government was a "genocidal regime which had betrayed the people and taken up the role of an agent of foreign reactionary forces", meaning China.

Hun Sen claimed the captured Chinese military advisers had been directly involved in repression and massive massacres in the Cambodian provinces of Prey Veng, Kompong Cham and Sway Reang, where they had razed several villages with their tanks.

He said his government had captured "millions" of weapons of all categories supplied to the Pol Pot regime, from rifles to tanks and Chinese-made MiG-17 and 19 fighter planes. At Pochentong airport more than 40 aircraft had been captured.

"Kampuchea (Cambodia) hopes that at some future date China will normalize its relations with it and then the captured military officers can be repatriated," he said.

Asked about the strength of the remnants of Pol Pot's forces Hun Sen said they now consisted of small groups which were scattered in the west and north near the Thailand border. They had no unified command or control and were "terrorizing" the civilian population.

It might take some time to capture them but they were merely a nuisance: his government exercised full control over the entire country.

Asked how these remnants were able to operate and survive, the minister said: "The Chinese expansionists are supplying them with arms and ammunition and food through Thailand," and asked if the Thai government was involved in channelling these supplies from China, he said: "We believed the statements of Prime Minister Kriangsak Chabanana in which he said Thailand would be neutral but of late the Thai government is not acting in accordance with those statements."

Kampuchea, he said, was not interfering in Thailand's internal affairs and expected that Thailand would not interfere in Kampuchean internal affairs.

His government had brought to an end the border conflicts the Pol Pot regime had started with Thailand, Laos and Vietnam.

Asked about the presence of Vietnamese troops in Kampuchea Hun Sen said they were there in accordance with the peace and friendship treaty his country had signed with Vietnam last month. The treaty provided that the two countries should extend support to one another in all fields.

The withdrawal of Vietnamese troops would depend upon the requirements of the peoples of the two countries.

Asked if Prince Sihanouk had any role to play, Hun Sen accused him of "serving the wicked schemes of China," categorically rejecting Sihanouk's proposal that another Geneva conference should be held on Indochina. (OFNS)

DARK PICTURE

The OPEC price tables have shifted upward again, leaving behind the careful formulas of December's Abu Dhabi meeting in exchange for an April 1 increase of 9.05 per cent. There are many problems solved at Abu Dhabi that will once more have to be sorted out — notably the introduction of an even, quarterly increase that would smooth out annual production levels. A provision allowing surcharges of up to $ 4 a barrel (the benchmark price will be $ 14.55) makes unlikely a return of stability among OPEC's many different current pricing strategies. So be it. The oil ministers can come to agreement on these and other issues in future meetings where price increases may not be as readily placed on the agenda.

In Washington meanwhile, the U.S. State Department has expressed "deep regret" over the latest round of increases and offers the opinion that they are "untimely and unjustified."

OPEC and the United States have passed this way before, so there is nothing startling in Washington's latest lament. The choice of the word "untimely," however, is apt, for the OPEC decision comes hard on the heels of a U.S. Treasury report that should make the Americans blush.

In simple language, the report says the United States has risked its national security, the stability of its currency and the credibility of its foreign policy through excessive reliance on imported oil.

Imports accounted for 45 per cent of America's oil consumption last year, or one fourth of all the energy — oil, coal, gas, hydroelectric, what have you — the country used. Nearly all of that imported oil (83 per cent) was supplied by OPEC.

The report marks the third time in 20 years that U.S. policymakers have been warned of the dangers of a voracious energy appetite. On each occasion, though, the picture has gotten darker.

OPEC has no interest in supporting this prodigal American use of its oil. Production levels are already much higher than the national interests several OPEC states can justify.

The United States is capable of taking several steps to get its own energy house in order and thus ease the pressure on OPEC. For a start, President Carter can remove price controls on oil produced in the United States (much of which sells for $ 9 a barrel). Conservation, increased use of Alaskan crude and alternative sources of energy are all issues familiar to Washington and in no need of repetition here.

The point is that Washington could serve its own interests by helping OPEC restore stability to the world oil market. If the U.S. consumed less oil, the dollar would be a healthier currency: OPEC price hikes would not be as irresistible, and American inflation would decline. If the U.S. consumed less oil, then OPEC producers could leave more of it in the ground, an investment in the future for the benefit of both sides.

Until that change takes place in America, however, its friends in OPEC can only express their "deep regret" and vote accordingly.

Washington choice

By George Gedda

WASHINGTON —

With the U.S. Congress about to assert its strong interest in a peaceful resolution of the Taiwan issue, the Carter administration is looking for ways to limit the damage to its carefully cultivated relationship with China.

Officials in Peking already have labeled the proposed legislation as unacceptable, contending that it goes beyond understandings on the Taiwan question reached by the United States and China in negotiations last year.

A House-Senate conference committee agreed last week that resolution of the Taiwan issue by other than peaceful means, "including boycotts or embargoes, would be a threat to the peace and security of the Western Pacific area and of grave concern to the United States."

Despite his reservations about the legislation, President Jimmy Carter is expected to approve it. The House was tentatively set to study the bill Wednesday and Senate action is expected Thursday. State Department officials, who asked not to be identified, said they will recommend to Carter that he issue a statement at the time he signs the measure declaring that it will not prevent the administration from honoring its commitments to Peking.

Officials said the administration has made clear to China its own concern that peace on Taiwan be preserved. While the legislation may change the tone of the U.S. position, the substance is left intact, the officials said.

They point out that the legislation, for example, does not provide for an automatic U.S. response in the event of Chinese military action against the island.

In a protest note recently delivered to U.S. Ambassador Leonard Woodcock and in official New China News Agency dispatches, the Chinese have made clear their objections to the legislation. The issue also reportedly arose in an unannounced meeting late Tuesday between Chinese Ambassador Chai Zemin and Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher. Officials refused comment on the meeting.

Implicit in the protests is Chinese disappointment that the administration was unable to persuade Congress to endorse fully the terms of the agreements negotiated.

Another source of concern to China is a section of the legislation which, in effect, recognizes the existence of the Taiwanese government even though the administration has severed all official ties with the island in keeping with the understandings negotiated with Peking.

The officials said they will explain to Chinese authorities that the legislation acknowledges the Taiwanese regime's existence only for domestic legal processes, which carry no weight in international law.

According to the officials, the impact of the legislation could be just the opposite of what Congress is intending. They say the Chinese may be reluctant to express peaceful intentions toward Taiwan because this would leave Peking open to charges that it is bending to U.S. pressure. (AP)

saudi press review

The Arabs are now faced with grave challenges — similar to those of 1948 when Israel was imposed on them — according to an editorial in "Okaz". Unless they formulate a unified strategy to prevent further fragmentation, they may well suffer consequences similar to those of that year. This is, then the real importance of a strategy to which all the Arabs should be committed to serve their supreme interests. Such a strategy would entail a careful study of Arab resources which would then be amassed to achieve their objective. We have had many setbacks in the past, but with prudence and careful planning we were able to overcome them, and we should do so this time.

"Al-Jezrah" said it could understand the jubilation of Begin on signing the peace agreement with Egypt because he got what he wanted and more. He was supported by the Israelis in the occupied lands, by the American Jews, and the governments that offered its full confidence in him. He was confident that he had secured the approval of his people with whom he had discussed the whole issue and consulted through a democratic process before signing anything. Not so the other side of the agreement.

But the night of the agreement was a watershed in Arab history, enabling the Arab people to know where they stand and where their friends and foes stand. And we hope that the Baghdad conference will embody the new realization and crystallize Arab responsibilities in the face of this ferocious new invasion which takes many forms.

The next step for Begin is not only to draw away with the Palestinian people — treating them like American Indians — but to consider the whole Arab people as American Indians too. This is already being planned against us, the paper said.

Hailing the Kuwait summit meeting of the two Yemeni presidents "Al-Balad" said the conference expected to restore peace between the two countries and spare the Arabs further anxiety.

Continued conflict between them not only threatens their own people and countries but also would divert Arab attention from their principal problem.

The conflict would have led to the involvement of other forces which have always wanted a foothold in the region to achieve their objectives to destabilize it.

Besides, the conflict would have certainly brought the two Yemeni dreams of unity to naught.

The Arabs are called upon to avoid mere reactions to the peace treaty and adopt a more rational approach that aims at preserving their rights and preventing further capitulation to the Zionists, according to "Al-Nadwa." The treaty was the worst kind of challenge to the Arabs and the apex of surrender of Arab rights.

Therefore, the Arabs must now do something of the highest possible standard that is calculated to prevent their enemies from achieving their goals. We have the men, the resources, the potentialities, but a top of that we need power and determination for a confrontation that is equal to the challenge.

"Al-Medina" pinned its hopes on the Baghdad conference for some positive resolutions that are not based on despair, diffidence or a sense of affliction. We should stop mourning and start doing something to strengthen Arab resolve and unity so that there may not be other serious divisions in the Arab world, the paper said. It reaffirmed the Saudi position with regard to the Palestinian question and the occupied Arab lands and that it will always support any Arab efforts to achieve their goals.

"Face of Arabia"

Photographs by Cecilia Green
Text: Michael Field, Tony Axon
1977, World of Information, Safron Walden, Essex, England

By Mary Ju McConahay

DHAHRAN— In this book of photographs, Cecilia Green tells us the "Face of Arabia" is still basically at one with the land and shores of the "Jazirat al-Arab"—the "Island of the Arabs."

"It is still identified widely with charming old villages, quiet dunes and a pastoral life. Such an interpretation is more debatable every day although it does make for some excellent pictures."

Like any artist, Cecilia Green has a bias, and this volume seems to come out of an inclination toward "romantic Arabia."

One composition in blue-greys and whites, for example, shows three men in a donkey cart lumbering down a road, presumably in Sharjah. There are pictures of pack mules, people walking on dusty tracks and of course, camels. Yet there is not a single photo which concentrates on the automobile, that mad machine chugging the highways of Arabia, changing concepts of distance and town planning, a ubiquitous symbol of success, a joy, a killer.

There are lively shots of mosques, of a roseate brick skyline spilling from the edge of a wide oasis, of tall Yemeni houses and pristine desert scenes. Yet surely the "Face of Arabia" is turning more toward modern cities every day. Beautiful or chaotic, where are the scenes in the new metropolises? Where the faces of those who have chosen the towns, or had them imposed upon their lives? Where the peculiarly Arabian version of the instant imparted urban center?

In Green's eye, the commercial hub of Dubai is framed by the pious of two wooden dhows, but there are no pictures of cargo ships or oil tankers, the life-lines for today's lifestyle. Indeed, except for company-report shots of an offshore rig and a Conoco storage tank under construction, oil and oil workers might be a less significant feature of the Face of Arabia than date palms and fish nets. This book should not have been called "Face..." but more correctly, "A Phase..." of Arabia.

Writers Michael Field and Tony Axon contribute to the rose-colored view from their first sentence: "The East has always exerted a particular hold over the European imagination."

Yet they do perform a service in their short introduction by noting that "there is a degree of presumption" in the way Europeans use the terms "Near," "Middle" and "Far" East as if all places could be named according to their geography relative to the continent. Too often, they observe, Westerners today see themselves bringing the benefits of technology to the East "and expecting to be congratulated for it," instead of remembering the scholarship and informed translations of early Arab scientists. Nevertheless, Field and Axon become carried away in their desire to prove the vast but generally inhospitable peninsula was "the cradle of civilization," conveniently neglecting to mention Baghdad, Damascus, Alexandria, Cordoba, etc.

But this is a result of enthusiasm, not an attempt to deceive and should not mar the achievement of the simple but compelling prose captions. Often the writers use selected quotes from journalists, poets and travelers. And their own long acquaintance with the region enables them to create text that is at once informative and sometimes even in the long-time resident, such as this explanation of the famous "singing sands."

"If in a bowl in the dunes the sand on one hunk slips, it will generate inside the dune a melodious humming noise which will reverberate around the walls of the bowl. The hedouin used to attribute the singing to djinns, until... (Philly) demonstrated to his guides that the sands could be made to sing, if they slid one after another down the different sides of the dunes."

For what it does portray, "Face of Arabia" is a book one can go back to again and again. Sometimes Green impresses as the genius of the collector's snapshot, sometimes as landscape or portrait artist. It's as if all Arabia were the family of a distant cousin and mud houses, or a blacksmith and friends in the act of forging a glowing-hot sword. At times Green may rattle purists by sacrificing perfect focus for the greater good of spontaneity. Or she may pose her subject, as in the case of a venerable tribesman with his curved silver dagger, looking straight into the camera.

Yet Green is no amateur. She knows how to compact a sociological treatise, for instance, into what first appears a passing frame from the Doha souk. On the left of a darkened stall tandem gunmetal-grey folding chairs stand foreign to the scene and abandoned while on the right two merchants chat at ease. One perches squatting on a high wooden bench; the other stands leaning toward him with one foot on the bench, comfortable as a stork in a pond.

A note: Saudi Arabia, given its size, appears grievously under-represented in this volume. Perhaps Green did not have the opportunity to work travel here as widely as she did in Yemen and the Gulf, or perhaps she was led by her eye for the romantic more often to other lands.

After that, a decision was issued by H.E. The Minister of Finance and National Economy licensing the bank to carry out its banking business in accordance with the provisions of the Banking Control Law, starting from 16 Shaaban 1397 A.H. This increase has been fully covered and the subscription to all new shares was completed on 10th Jumada II 1398 A.H. (17th May 1978).

4. Business results

5. New Branches

The Board of Directors has prepared a plan for extending the bank's activities to a number of towns and areas in the Kingdom. The bank has already started that by opening a branch in Riyadh — the capital of the Kingdom —. This branch commenced business on 15th Jumada II 1398 A.H. (22nd April 1978). The bank will open other branches (initially in Jubail, with other branches to follow) during the year 1979 after preparing their relative premises and ensuring that well trained staff will be available.

6. Staff

From the start the bank has paid special attention to selecting appropriate Saudi citizens to work in its branches. The bank has prepared training programmes in order to train and qualify them for various duties they will be called upon to perform. The bank will spare no effort to send some of them abroad in order to join training courses with other banking institutions.

Conclusion

In conclusion of this brief report the Board of Directors wishes to submit their gratitude and highest appreciation to His Majesty the King, the Crown Prince and the government for the encouragement and help extended to the bank and to state that a substantial part of the foregoing results was achieved with the grace of God and the help of the government's rational policy.

The Board in particular wishes to thank the Ministry of Finance and National Economy and the Saudi Arabian Monetary Agency for their support.

The Board also wishes to mention the cooperation between the bank and Algemene Bank Nederland N.V., existing from the time the bank started its business.

The Board also extends their greetings to the bank's Management and staff for their efforts during the said period. The Board thanks the bank clients and correspondents for their trust, encouragement and cooperation which have contributed to the achievement of the results submitted to the General Meeting.

In general the Board pray God Almighty for success and guidance.

Asif 100 redeems Test for Pakistan

PERTH, March 28. (AP) — A superb unbeaten century by vice-captain Asif Iqbal has helped Pakistan to recover from the brink of defeat in the second Test against Australia at the WACA Ground Wednesday.

Australia was charging toward victory when Pakistan tottered at 153 for six at tea, a flimsy lead of only 103 runs.

But then Asif, with capable assistance from Imran Khan, turned the tide and at stumps Pakistan had reached for seven in its second innings and an overall lead of 196 runs.

Asif reached his 100 six minutes before stumps and he will resume batting Thursday morning on 101 with Sarfaraz Nawaz.

Wimbledon seats oversubscribed by record $1m

LONDON, March 28 (AP) — More than 500,000 pounds ($1 million) is to be returned to unsuccessful applicants for Wimbledon Center Court and No. 1 Court tickets this year.

So great was the demand for seats for the world's leading tennis tournament that the organizing committee was forced to cut down the ticket quota for the championship, to be held from June 25 to July 7.

Instead of two double tickets — one for each week — normally sold to those successful in the annual ballot, this year only one double was allowed.

The slim Asif has taken charge of the Australian attack in his top class innings that has occupied 231 minutes and has included 14 boundaries.

He and Imran added 92 for the seventh wicket in 115 minutes before Imran was caught behind off the bowling of Alan Hurst five minutes before stumps. Imran had done a solid job in scoring 15.

The Australians made a costly error 35 minutes earlier when Imran, on q, got a top edge to a hook off Hurst, and Geoff Dymock, at fine leg, dropped an easy catch.

Unless Australia can take the final three Pakistan wickets in the first hour Wednesday the chances of an Australian victory look remote. A draw looms as the probable result.

Asif has now scored 11 centuries, and only Hanif Mohammad, with 12, has scored more test 100's for Pakistan.

He did not offer a chance and he scored with some superb cuts, drives and pulls.

The Australian attack was hard pressed Wednesday because fast bowler Rodney Hogg spent a considerable time off the field, suffering from a strained thigh muscle.

But it was Hogg who made the initial breakthrough when he removed Zaheer Abbas for 18, caught by wicketkeeper Kiev Wright down the leg side.

Hurst bowled tirelessly and finished the day with three for 72 off 19 overs, while Dymock had taken one for 72 and off spinner Bruce Yardley, one for 42.

GIANTKILLER: Houston's 5-9 guard Calvin Murphy, who held off the towering Gilmore Tuesday.

David downs Goliath for Houston NBA win

NEW YORK, March 28 (AP) — Calvin played David to Artis Gilmore's Goliath — with about the same success as the original little guy had.

Gilmore, Chicago's towering 7-foot-2 center, had the ball under the basket with less than a minute to play Tuesday night. The stuff shot he had in mind would draw the Bulls within one point of Houston.

But Murphy, 17 inches shorter than Gilmore, had other ideas. When Artis started his move, Murphy made his, swiping the ball and drawing a backcourt foul. The 5-9 guard then sank the pair of foul shots that gave Houston a full three-point edge and the Rockets pulled out to a 123-116 victory.

In the rest of the National Basketball Association it was Indiana 104, New Orleans, 101; Cleveland, 111, Boston 109; Seattle 115, San Diego, 109; Philadelphia, 100, Washington, 109; and Portland, 123, New York; 112.

78 compete in UPM tennis tourney today

By Geoff Gardner
DHAHRAN, March 28 — The Eastern Province Tennis League will cap its second season with a singles and doubles tournament for its wide range of members.

Top players will compete for a trip for two to Bahrain in the A Flight to highlight the singles play slated for March 29-30. In all, 78 players will play in three singles flights, and 40 teams compose the doubles draw. All doubles matches are set for April 5-6.

The tournament is the second in the brief history of the League, which was created at the beginning of 1978 by University of Petroleum and Minerals tennis coach Neil Perkins to give his players match competition. At present, 27 teams compose the A, B, and C levels of the league with UPM players making up one team at each level.

The competition will be important for the university players since a representative of the Saudi Arabia Table Tennis and Tennis Federation will be in Dharan to watch. The Federation is planning to send a number of players to the World Student Games in Mexico City, September 2-13, according to Perkins.

Wolves, United unbeaten and fit for F.A. semis

LONDON, March 28 (R) — Manchester United and Wolverhampton, Football Association (F.A.) Cup semifinalists Saturday, avoided defeat — and injuries — in rearranged First Division matches Tuesday night.

The Manchester club trailed, 2-0, at Middlesbrough to goals from David Armstrong from a penalty and Mark Proctor. But in a second half revival, Gordon McQueen and Steve Coppell scored in quick succession for a 2-2 final score. It plays Liverpool Saturday.

Wolves, who meet Arsenal in the other Cup clash, shared two goals with Manchester City but will feel that they squandered a point in allowing Mick Channon to equalize 15 minutes from time.

Willie Carr put Wolves ahead, on a muddy pitch and only City goalkeeper Peter Corrigan kept the score down until Channon kicked a goal — his seventh in nine matches.

Air fares likely to go up after OPEC price rise

GENEVA, March 28 (R) — Major world airlines started talks Wednesday on the impact of the OPEC oil price increase and higher air fares seem the likely outcome.

The International Air Transport Association (IATA), which groups 80 per cent of the world's air traffic, received with gloom Tuesday's decision by OPEC to raise oil prices by almost nine per cent and hold out the possibility of a "market premium" on top.

The airlines already faced a one-third increase in fuel prices and a shortage in supplies while passenger and cargo demand has expanded by 10 per cent.

A spokesman said IATA hoped for a consensus on regional action, and to avoid an across-the-board surcharge.

The talks were to be private, with no agreements likely to be announced before Friday, the spokesman said.

Prices had fluctuated so widely in recent months, from 48 cents gallon at the end of 1978 to more than $1 a gallon reported for oil bought on the spot by airlines, the IATA spokesman said.

The airlines had been expecting to pay a 10 per cent increase in aviation fuel prices over the year as a result of OPEC's staged increases for 1979. These have now been brought forward by the organization's ministerial meeting here just ended.

The spokesman said it was hoped the technical effort would let airlines know "possibly where they will be going over the next six months to a year." But he added the airlines might not automatically pass on the increased costs.

Plans announced by Transworld Airways (TWA) to put a seven per cent surcharge on North Atlantic routes did not commit other carriers and there had been no IATA agreement on fares for those routes since 1977.

Some airlines might decide to absorb the costs and governments might force others to keep prices steady for political reasons, he said.

Sadat asks U.S. business to revive Egypt economy

WASHINGTON, March 28 (R) — Egyptian President Anwar Sadat has urged American investors to help Egypt revitalize its economy.

Speaking at a dinner given by the American Chamber of Commerce Tuesday Night Sadat said Egypt, under his leadership, had three slogans: peace, democracy and prosperity.

"With the help of President Carter we have achieved peace. Democracy is my own responsibility," he said. "But on prosperity I count on your help. You must help me to achieve prosperity."

He said Egypt needed huge investments to improve its infrastructure and to solve urgent problems, such as housing and food shortages.

Carter, who attended the session, urged businessmen to help the Egyptian leader.

"I have known this man well. He kept every word he has given me. Whenever he says this is the Egyptian position, he never deviates from it," Carter said.

N.Y. judge rejects move to freeze Iran deposits

NEW YORK, March 28 (AP) — A New York State Supreme Court judge has rejected a move by two major American telecommunications corporations to freeze almost $141 million in bank funds to prevent the new Iranian government from collecting it.

Justice Michael Donatelli ruled Tuesday in suits brought by American Bell International and General Telephone and Electronics International. The companies had sought to bar payment on letters of credit until the political situation in Iran stabilized.

American Bell contended that Iran breached a $280 million telecommunications contract by failing to perform contractual requirements after the fall of the Shah's government in January.

The firm asked that payment be barred on a $38.8 million letter of credit it obtaining to match an equal down payment by Iran. The letter was designed to allow Iran get back its down payment at any time.

The obtained four letters of credit totalling $102 million from three banks to guarantee its contractual performance and an Iranian down payment on another telecommunications project.

In his ruling, Donatelli noted that most of the money in question belonged to Iran, not to the American corporations.

He also said that the letters of credit were "separate and independent" from the contracts.

Relief on oil bolsters market

NEW YORK, March 28 — An oil price increase by OPEC that was not as bad as anticipated sent the Dow Jones Industrial Average much higher Tuesday. At the close the Dow was up 16.54. Transports gained 3.79 and utilities rose 33. Volume of trading was 33 million shares. Breadth was on the positive side with gainers outnumbering losers by a 2 1/2 to 1 margin. The American Stock Exchange rose 2.44 a new all time closing high.

Among the basic industry issues Bethlehem Steel up 1/2 to 34 1/2. DuPont gained 6 1/2 to 144 1/2. Dow added 1 1/2 to 59 1/2. and Financial Federation dropped 1 1/2 to 36.

Auto and machinery issues gained ground with GM up 1/2 to 56 1/2. Caterpillar gained 1 1/2 to 61 1/2 and Ingersoll Rand rose 2 1/2 to 52 1/2.

World Bank may double $40b capital

NEW YORK, March 28 (AP) — The World Bank is considering doubling its capital to $80 billion during the early 1980s, a senior bank official has said.

The official said Tuesday a proposal to add $40 billion to the current capital of some $40 billion will be considered soon by the bank's executive directors and governors. He declined to say how much of the additional capital will be paid by members as opposed to normal commitments.

Of the current $40 billion in capital and reserves, around $32.5 billion is callable from members.

Sudan agriculture given $30m loans

KHARTOUM, March 28 (R) — The United Nations Development Program and the World Food for Agricultural Development have extended two loans to Sudan totalling $30 million to help develop agriculture in Sudan's southern region, the Sudan News Agency (SUNA) has reported.

The agency Tuesday said Britain's Ministry for Overseas Development had also agreed to grant Sudan $18.5 million in technical aid for the same project.

Famous Hand

North dealer. Both sides vulnerable.

NORTH: A K Q 5 3, 7 6 4 2, 10 9 2, K 8

WEST: 7 4, 10 8 7, 10 8 6 5, A 8

EAST: J 10 8 2, K 8 5 2, A, J 18 4

SOUTH: A J 9, K 7 4, Q 9 7 5 3 2

The bidding: North 1♣, East 2♣, South 2♣, West 2NT, Pass, 3NT.

Opening lead - six of diamonds.

Spectacular plays - and the opportunities to make them - are comparatively rare.

The nature of the game is such that what basically determines how a player ultimately fares is the ability to hold one's errors to a minimum.

However, it cannot be denied that spectacular plays are part of the game and have an aura all their own. When the proper occasion arises, these plays furthermore prove to be extremely interesting.

For example, consider this famous hand where the Italian star Benito Garozzo seized an opportunity to make a highly unusual defensive play. He was West and led the six of diamonds against three notrump. East took the diamond with the ace and, unable to return his partner's suit, returned the deuce of hearts instead. Declarer, fished, losing the nine to West's ten, ducked Garozzo's queen of hearts continuation, and won the next heart lead with the ace.

Declarer now played a low club towards dummy's K-8 and would have made three notrump had Garozzo also played low. In that case, South would have won the club in dummy with the king and played another club, ducking East's ten in the hope that West originally held the doubleton ace.

But Garozzo, acutely aware of the danger his side faced, rushed up with the ace on the first club lead and returned the queen of diamonds!

As a result of this dramatic play - which allowed declarer to score two diamond tricks instead of only one - South could no longer make the contract. The queen of diamonds return, by forcing out the king, stopped declarer from scoring more than one club trick, and the outcome was that South eventually went down two.

Vital Ulstermen tight-lipped

Callaghan looks likely to lose vote

LONDON, March 28 (Agencies) — Parliament was Wednesday debating a crucial vote of confidence that could well force embattled Prime Minister James Callaghan into an early general election.

After three years of shaky rule, Callaghan was fighting to avoid the indignity of becoming only the second British leader in modern times to be driven out of office by Parliament.

His chances of surviving a knife-edge vote looked slim. With only hours to go, the votes appeared to be split 314-312 in favour of a no confidence motion tabled by Opposition leader Margaret Thatcher. But it was so close the result could swing on a last-minute illness or car accident.

Billed by newspapers as the parliamentary cliff-hanger of the century, the outcome: rested with a handful of Northern Ireland Protestant MPs.

Although they are under orders from their party to vote down the government, the Ulster Unionist members played cat-and-mouse with the press by refusing to confirm they would back Mrs. Thatcher's motion.

If she wins Wednesday night, there will be an election within weeks — probably in May — with Mrs. Thatcher going into the campaign as firm favourite to become Europe's first woman prime minister.

Her right-wing Conservative Party has a 13 per cent lead over the Labor Party, according to the latest opinion polls.

If the minority government pulls through, an election is anyway unlikely to be delayed much longer. Michael Foot, the Leader of the House, acknowledged Tuesday night that a poll would come "fairly soon."

A few labor backbenchers speculate that the prime minister could even surprise parliament by naming a date in the debate before the vote.

Party managers were recalling two members from the United States. Another, Sir Alfred Broughton, was being ferried to the House of Commons by ambulance. He is 72 and suffers from chest trouble.

The only time this century a government has lost a vote of confidence in 1924 when the Labor administration of Ramsay MacDonald was defeated.

The Ulster Unionists met late Tuesday night to decide who should vote. One of them, ex-Conservative Enoch Powell, said party chief Jim Molyneux would speak "on behalf of us all" in the debate, and this was taken as an indication that all 10 would vote against the government.

Defeat for Callaghan appeared likely, with 281 Conservatives, 13 Liberals, 11 Scottish Nationalists and 10 Ulster Unionists voting against the government, and 307 Labor members, three Welsh Nationalists and two Scottish Labor Party men on the other side.

May 10 was widely predicted for the election date, if one is called.

Callaghan has to call a general election if he loses the vote. If he wins, he can continue in office until October, completing the full five-year term since the last general election.

Opinion polls suggest the Conservatives are certain to win if an election is held this spring. They are running 13 to 20 percentage points ahead of Labor, which should give them about 330 seats, or a voting majority of about 30.

Labor has been badly hurt by strikes of truckers, which crippled the already shaky economy, and of sanitation men, ambulance drivers, gravediggers and other service workers which caused general inconvenience and discomfort to the public. Callaghan wanted to delay the election until autumn in the hope that public annoyance would subside and Labor's chances would improve.

The Conservatives were last in power from 1970 to 1974. The vote of confidence was triggered by the failure of Callaghan's government to win sufficient backing in a referendum March 1 for limited home rule in Scotland and the subsequent defection of the Scottish Nationalists in Parliament.

A FUNNY THING MAY HAPPEN: On her way to the House of Commons Wednesday opposition Conservative leader Margaret Thatcher said "I think it may happen," referring to the vote of confidence which may bring down the Callaghan government. (AP photo)

Major cancer progress cited by U.S. experts

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. March 28 (R) — Vaccine that is nearly 100 per cent effective against all forms of cancer in rats and mice has been developed by scientists at the National Cancer Institute in Bethesda, Maryland, it was announced Wednesday.

Dr. Robert Huebner, headed the research project, said the mouse vaccine works only in mice and the rat vaccine only in rats. However, the scientific principles that led to the development of these vaccines may make it possible to develop a similar vaccine for humans, he said.

Dr. Huebner, 65, from the institute's laboratory of cellular and molecular biology, made his presentation at the American Cancer Society's Annual Science Writer's Seminar.

The vaccine, made from cancer-damaged genes or cancerous cells themselves, is based mostly on the same principle as vaccine for many other diseases including polio and measles. When the organism or substance which causes the illness is injected, in a tiny quantity or weakened condition, into patients, their bodies respond by producing natural defenses. The next time the body is exposed it has an army of defenses already waiting.

Dr. Huebner said his laboratory has begun work on producing a vaccine for chimpanzees. If that vaccine proves effective and safe, work that could take several years — the groundwork would have been laid for an attempt to try the same thing in humans, he said.

In another presentation at the seminar, Dr. Thomas Dougherty, principal cancer research scientist at Roswell Park Memorial Institute in Buffalo, New York, said tumors are reduced, and in some cases destroyed, when treated with a light sensitive chemical and then exposed to bright light.

Dr. Dougherty said the treatment has been used successfully on tumors just under the skin of about 50 patients.

Saudi soccer team goes to Baghdad finals

BAGHDAD, March 28 — The Saudi national team moved into the final of the Gulf Games soccer tournament here Wednesday with an emphatic 4-0 victory over Oman, meeting the victor of a match between Iraq and Kuwait.

The Saudi dominated the match throughout, with striker Saud Jasim putting away two goals and Issa Khalifa and Majed Abdullah finding the net.

The Saudi side now has four points after a convincing 2-1 defeat of the UAE Saturday.

Water pump breaks down

U.S. atom plant leaks radiation

HARRISBURG, Penna. March 28 (AP) — A water pump used to cool the reactor at the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant broke down Wednesday, and authorities said some radiation steam escaped into the atmosphere before the building could be sealed. Authorities said there were no injuries and the radiation outside was not considered dangerous.

Blaine Fabian, spokesman for Metropolitan Edison, one of the consortium of utilities which runs the plant, said a valve in the pressure steam system blew out at 4 a.m.

He said the radiation level inside the building was higher than normal, but there were no injuries.

The radiation level outside was also higher than normal, but not at a level considered dangerous to health, Fabian said.

Officials at the plant, located on an island on the Susquehanna River about 10 miles southeast of the state capital here, declared a "general emergency" when the accident occurred at 4 a.m.

Residents near the plant were not evacuated, according to Judy Botvin, a spokesman for the plant. State Police spokesman James Cox said that Metropolitan Edison officials had requested a state police helicopter "that will carry a monitoring team." He said he did not know what would be monitored.

State Police were on the scene, controlling traffic near the site. Another generating unit already was shut down for refueling, an official said.

In Washington, Frank Ingram, a spokesman for the nuclear Regulatory Commission said he knew only that there had been "some kind of accident" at the power plant.

The $1-billion generating station, which began operating commercially in 1974, is accessible only by a bridge from the rural township of Londonderry.

ADF mandate extended for half requested period

BEIRUT, March 28 (R) — Lebanon said Wednesday the Arab League has extended the mandate of the Arab Deterrent Force (ADF) by three months instead of the six months requested by the Lebanese government.

The mandate of the 30,000 man force, composed almost entirely of Syrian troops, is due to expire on April 28.

Prime Minister Selim Hoss said the Arab League Decision on a three-month extension was made at a weekend meeting in Mogadishu — despite a clear Lebanese request for double that period.

"We do not think the Arab League will withhold from Lebanon a natural convalescence" from the 1975-6 civil war, Hoss said after a weekly cabinet meeting.

He had received no official confirmation of local press reports that Arab states which finance the ADF would stop their contributions at the end of the next mandate.

Hoss added that he planned to leave on Sunday for a visit to Saudi Arabia, which provides the bulk of the ADF's six-monthly budget of $90 million.

The ADF, set up in October 1976 to end the Lebanese civil war, originally included small contingents from Saudi Arabia, Sudan, South Yemen and the United Arab Emirates.

Most of these units withdrew after the force became involved in several rounds of heavy fighting against right-wing militias last year. Its present strength is estimated at 25,000 Syrians and 800 men from the UAE.

"As-Safir," a left-wing Lebanese newspaper, said Wednesday the Arab League had decided that the three-month period would be the last extension of the mandate.

Saudi Arabia withdrew its contingent from Beirut last week, leaving Lebanese troops and para-military forces to take over strongpoints in eastern districts of the capital hit by last year's Syrian-rightist fighting.

Egypt, the U.S. will do its best to see that it is carried out.

forget Sultan Qabus and President Jaafar Nuweiri and we will cast them out for supporting PLO."

In another interview, Khaddam predicted that President Sadat would be overthrown before the end of this year.

"I expect Mr. Sadat to suffer an even more abrupt end than the Shah of Iran," Khaddam told the French daily "Le Monde." "He will be overthrown before the end of this year, before the first stage of the treaty is implemented."

again that Sadat is a traitor," he said in his first comment on the signing of the treaty.

Gen. Saadeddine Chazli, a former Egyptian army chief of staff now living in exile said Tuesday the treaty would cause the downfall of Sadat.

In London, 20 Palestinian students occupied the London offices of the Arab League to help pressure the Arab foreign and finance ministers meeting at Baghdad into at least executing their earlier Baghdad conference decisions, and in particular the decisions on boycotting the Egyptian regime.

Dubai

In his statement Sheikh Rashid called on friendly neighboring Arab states to mediate in the dispute, a task that may be undertaken either by Qatar or Kuwait. Qatar's Foreign Minister, Sheikh Schim bin Hamad Al-Thani, has been visiting the United Arab Emirates for the past five days, reportedly to advise the local rulers on the dangers of disunity.

Man threatens Moscow Embassy with explosion

MOSCOW, March 28 (R) — A young man walked into the U.S. Embassy here Wednesday and threatened to explode a bomb if he was not given permission to leave the Soviet Union, informed sources said.

U.S. Marine guards sealed off the north wing of the central Moscow embassy after the man entered the consular section clutching an object in front of him, at about 2.30 local time (1130 GMT) and demanded an exit visa, they said.

Soviet and embassy officials were still negotiating with the man three hours later, they added.
